Prose (Guided Tours of Hell . . . , 1997, etc.) returns with a characteristically sly and biting send-up of academia and the political correctness that plagues our days. Ted Swensen is a well-reviewed novelist procrastinating on his own next book by teaching creative writing at a small New England college. Happily married to the college nurse, Sherrie, Swensen is a kind of academic everyman ...

Review: Blue Angel | Boston Review

Francine Prose's Blue Angel (2000) bears more than a little resemblance to Richard Russo's Straight Man (1997), which isn't bad—both are smart, funny novels that use English departments as a launching rather than end point to explore politics, society, and life. Bad novels become mired in their time and place; good novels transcend them by making a particular time and place a metaphor ...
