The Mad King Edgar Rice

The Mad King is a Ruritanian romance by American writer Edgar Rice Burroughs, originally published in two parts as "The Mad King" and "Barney Custer of Beatrice" in All-Story Weekly, in 1914 and 1915, respectively. These were combined for the book edition, first published in hardcover by A. C. McClurg in 1926.

The Mad King - Wikipedia

"Edgar Rice Burroughs was, and is, the most influential writer, bar none, of our century." Ray Bradbury. The Mad King Synopsis. Life as a gentleman-farmer in the once-wild West was hardly exciting enough for an adventurer and master swordsman like Barney Custer.

The Mad King > Edgar Rice Burroughs

Edgar Rice Burroughs' The Mad King (published 1926) is true to the Ruritanian Romance genre popularized by Anthony Hope's The Prisoner of Zenda (published 1894). A ruler (usually of a small European country -- although Robert A. Heinlein's Double Star takes it galactic and won his the Hugo Award in 1956) is somehow incapacitated, imprisoned, kidnapped, etc.

Edgar Rice Burroughs' works are all fun to read. This book was surprising because it did not take place in a science-fiction setting. However, it did include the usual story of a man falling in love with a woman and rescuing her more than once and getting captured and having incredible luck to escape impossible situations.
